

Meet Stoup Brewing – Washington Beer Talk

September 6, 2019
Cycling Certified Cicerone

Yikes! That was a bit of a hiatus. I probably coulda started episode up last week or maybe even one week before, but nothing could be done. Thanks to a non-cicerone related bike accident, I broke my collar bone. It set my schedule back a bit, but it was kinda nice to just relax for a while. Thankfully for me, I have plenty of episodes recorded and waiting to hit the editing room. Stoup is the first of those! So to all those waiting patiently, here we go!

Stoup is a fantastic brewery in Ballard, in the region of Lucky Envelope, Populux, and Reuben's. Known for nailing a wide variety of styles including their German styles especially, they hit the ground running in 2013. The three founders, Robin,

Brad, and Lara (who I spoke with today) came to the table with a good assortment of experience and skills and were relatively early to the scene, a hand of cards that has served them well as their brewery continues to grow rapidly. Give it a listen!

Thank you to Hans Peng, my newest Patreon member! He gets some stickers and coasters and will get to choose a question that will be asked in an upcoming episode all in addition to access to the real feed with every episode!

Washington Beer Talk has a Patreon! Patreon.com/Cycling-Cicerone to select a rewards tier. Get access to extra and extended episodes and more!
